Argo 1945

The college year behind us was different—not like other college years at all. There were no football games, and this year the Navy ran the obstacle course and every Monday and Friday the smart sharp lines of the Army companies made a parade ground of the Quadrangle for retreat.

There were dances—sure, but the khaki and the blue stood out on the dance floor and the stag line was mostly girls who had come to watch the fun and dream about last year's Interfraternity when Johnny was here.

We had Chapel every morning at nine-fifty, same as ever; but the morning prayer usually included a thought for the boys in the service. And who of the upperclassmen didn't think of another chapel in another year when someone helped hold the hymnal with them.

Students went to classes every day and maybe even cut a little less because they missed so much. We studied harder than ever and played harder and everything went faster and faster and then somewhere along the line of the school year each student got mad at the world.

Usually it would be some serene Spring morning when the sun sifted down through the trees to make patterns on Old Main terrace and the ivy on the tower glistened and looked alive—a perfect morning for a stroll through the New Wilmington countryside. The student got mad because Westminster wasn't the same and because he didn't have time for that stroll in the country. But in his heart the student knew that Westminster hadn't changed. It was only that for a little while, Westminster had to give up her peaceful way of life, just as hundreds of Westminster Johnnies have had to alter their lives and go to the battlefields all over the world.

This book is a record of the temporary changes at Westminster. This is Westminster at war.

Dedication . . .

The clear sharp notes of retreat floated over the campus and each khaki clad company drew itself up in silent attention to the lowering of the stars and stripes from Old Main tower. As the strain died away softly, short commands were given and the solid blocks of khaki melted and became swarms of men headed for mess.

The men of the ASTP were college students like the rest of us. It was only at times like retreat and inspection that they were very military and correct; but when these times were over they ran for their mail, for a coke in the Grille, or for a talk with their girl—like normal college students.

Some of them were homesick at first but they grew to love Westminster and sang "Tell Me Why" with lumps in their throats like the rest of us. Some of them were cocky—'no kid stuff, college stuff for me'. But they got over it and cheered as lustily as we did for the Towering Titans.

We didn't need special rules or regulations just for the ASTP boys—they fitted in. They helped with Chapel programs and with dances. They welcomed the service center and enjoyed our lectures and concerts.

It is to these soldiers who adapted their lives to Westminster's way of living that we dedicate this book. Godspeed them all.

Hup!

Classes—the beginning, the reason we came to college. Physics, Math, American lit. We start our college day by racing to an eight o'clock and it is fitting that we start this record of college days with the classes. Wartime courses were fuller and faster. We added Navigation and other warminded classes. Tests and quizzes were more frequent. We learned and crammed and crammed and learned. These are our classes and our faculty—the 'Hup,'—the beginning of college life.

Two . . .

Athletics—the second step. There was no football but the victory bell clanged for every home game of the Towering Titans. The spectators and players alike came from each game relaxed and ready to face tomorrow's work. Although women students were barred from the college gym, they managed to find time for their sports in the Community house. Our athletics were important this year—they kept us healthy and served as a release for the nervous war energy which we all piled up.

Three . . .

Activities—we had plenty. Besides the Holcad, Argo, Student Council, and all the annual jobs, there were the new ones. Like the War Fund drive, the Servicenter, and the new Life Service Group. Between classes, and at night we entered whole-heartedly into this—the third phase of our college life. In doing this we widened our horizons and increased our ability to get along with one another; but best of all, activities kept us busy and gave us plenty to write Johnny about.

Four . . .

Features—when assignments are done, when the Holcad has gone to press, when the game is won; we forgot the cares of the day and we enjoyed ourselves. In doing so we built for ourselves another Westminster memory. Long after we've forgotten Watson's theories of Psychology, we'll remember that night when the snow glistened and sparkled and Johnny, home on leave, held your hand just a little tighter as the moon rose over the black hulk of Browne hall.

Dr. Robert F. Galbreath

"Is Prexy speaking in Chapel tonight?" We forget all those little things awaiting us if Prexy is speaking, for who would miss a chance to hear Dr. Galbreath speak to us in our own language about something that concerns us in particular.

Dr. Robert Ferguson Galbreath, President of Westminster College, furnishes that understanding, quiet and inspiring part of college that will lie a little deeper in our memories of Westminster. Taking personal interest in all, he writes countless letters to the ever-increasing list of Westminster service men, not to mention the letter published in the Holcad every week going out to all our service men, reminding them that Westminster will always be waiting to welcome them back.

Dean Mary E. Turner

Dean Mary E. Turner, who resigned this spring, dealt with the problems of college women. Dean Turner has been with Westminster twelve years, since 1932, and was a well-known, well-loved figure on campus. Helpful and friendly, she was always in her office, ready to talk over the troubles of any who wished advice, and as an understanding dean of women has reserved a place in our memories of Westminster.

Dr. Harold L. Black, Acting Dean, has done a splendid job in tackling the many problems that arise in connection with the ASTP, Navy, and civilian life on campus during the year. Endowed with a strong sense of understanding, he is always willing and eager to help students who go to him with their problems.

Ancient Language Department—"Omnia Gallia est divida in tres partes," can be heard in the third floor of Old Main as the Latin students try to absorb Caesar. The professor of Latin, also Greek, and ancient Greek and Roman history, is Dr. Gilbert H. Taylor, A.B., Ph.D.

Dr. Taylor, head of ancient language department since 1925, had a two year fellowship to the American Academy at Rome, and a Johnston fellowship in Latin at Johns Hopkins University. He became an honorary member of Kappa Phi Lambda fraternity last year.

As an added job during the war-time school curriculum, Dr. Taylor taught math to the army.

Art Department—The Art department of Westminster College is in charge of Professor Harold J. Brennan, A.B., A.M., Carnegie Institute of Technology, University of Paris. Among the many art courses offered by the department are the history of art, costumes, and home decoration, the study of Renaissance, Modern, American, and contemporary art, art technics, designing, drawing, painting, craftwork, and the study of art and commerce.

In the spring of the year, students from art laboratory are seen all over campus sketching trees, buildings, birds, and wild life. Students sometimes serve as models for sketches made by art students under Professor Brennan's direction.

Bible Department—The Bible department is familiar to every Westminster co-ed and collegiate. The head of the department, Dr. John Orr, A.B., M.A., B.D., Ph.D., assisted by Dr. Ralph Neale, A.B., B.D., D.D., of the local United Presbyterian Church and Mr. Wayne Christy, A.B., Th.B., A.M., welcome the green freshmen and aid the thesis-writing juniors.

This year's ninety-five percent feminine classes were guided through the missionary journeys of Paul, and the family troubles of the Old Testament. They learned the books of the Bible while Juniors struggled through the numerous and complex ethical theories.

Few Westminster grads will forget the last minute rush to complete the questions of the syllabus or the heated discussions which sometimes arose in bull sessions over some controversial point. It is one of the essential parts of Westminster and one we will all remember.

Business and Economics Department—The Economics and Business department, under the direction of Captain William McKee, A.B., A.M., has carried out a two-fold program of economics in business and economic geography. The schedule of the Army Specialized Training Program necessitated the introduction of a course in economic geography; furthermore, this course was made available to college students. Most of the army classes and all of the college classes in this course were taught by Frank M. Brettholle, B.B.A., M.B.A.

Upperclassmen interested in business are familiar with Professor Herbert C. Graebner, B.B.A., M.B.A., who had charge of accounting classes. Although Mr. Ross Ellis, B.S., M.B.A., is recognized largely for his work as business manager, he, too, lectures to a few advanced classes. The cooperation of the Economics department with leading businessmen brought about the organization of the Economic and Business Foundation. These men discussed present and post-war economy at periodic forums in Youngstown.

Education and Psychology—Every student has been aided at one time or another by the Education and Psychology department. By the use of vocational aptitude and intelligence tests, this department has helped the individual student discover his abilities and talents. It is also in charge of training prospective teachers, and supervises the practice teaching, dreaded by seniors.

The department is headed by Mr. Carroll Leeds, A.B., M.A., with two years toward Ph.D. at the University of Minnesota. Mr. Leeds is interested in instrumental music, but has little time now to pursue his hobby. Assisting Mr. Leeds is Miss Eva Goodenough, B.S., M.S., a newcomer to the department. Mr. Harold J. Brennan of the Art Department, A.B., M.A., also assisted the department as Junior education instructor during the first semester.

English Department—Every day students wander in and out of the English offices on second floor, Old Main, where

Dr. Mary Purdy, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., head of the department, cautions freshmen to remember Kierzik's rule P2b on comma splices.

The student coming in for his advanced composition notebook finds Dr. Virginia Everett, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., talking about "my boys", the army cadets whom she instructed. He reads her snappy comments on themes, and laughs at her fitting snatches from Chaucer and Thoreau.

Mrs. Mary McConagha, A.B., A.M., holds conferences with those freshmen having trouble with topic sentences and faulty outlines.

While waiting for Mr. James Baker, A.B., A.M., to return to the conference room, an English "lit" student munches on a pretzel from the brightly painted Russian bowl on the table near the book cases, while another reads the latest copy of "Atlantic Monthly".

New instructor in the English department is Miss Leila McNeill, of Scotland. Miss McNeill taught several classes of army cadets, and helped relieve congestion in freshmen English courses.

History Department—History department head Dr. Leon Marshall, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., specializes in English history, and also teaches ancient history to freshmen. He finds time, too, for his favorite, a course in current history, and in Thursday morning chapel programs reviews news events of the past week, interpreting them for easy understanding.

Mr. Neil McNall, B.S., M.A., conducts American history and sociology classes. American government is taught by Mr. Thomas V. Mansell, New Wilmington practicing lawyer. Newest addition to the department, Mr. Irvin C. Wyllie, A.B., A.M., teaches American and world history.

While the ASTP unit was on campus, the department was busy teaching American history to the cadets. Now that the army has left, professors can devote more time to thesis-writing seniors and other majors in the department.

Math Department—Nothing is more important today in the training of the members of our armed forces than a thorough understanding of mathematics. This has been stressed in all the army and navy specialized training programs. This year, our ASTP and naval air cadets joined with civilian students in unravelling the mysteries of algebra, trigonometry, and analytic geometry.

Head of the department of mathematics is our dean of men, Dr. Harold L. Black, A.B., A.M., Ph.D. Dean Black is a member of Sigma Xi and the American Mathematics Society. The assistants in the mathematics department are Miss Lola Sewall, B.S., M.S., who also is Residence Director of Ferguson Hall, J. Byers King, B.S., Mrs. Willard Sarver, B.S., and R. Glenn Hall, A.B. Mr. King, Mrs. Sarver, and Mr. Hall are newly added mathematics teachers.

Modern Language Department—Head of the Modern Language department is Miss Mary Elizabeth Stewart, A.B., A.M., French instructor. Miss Stewart traveled widely in Germany, Switzerland, and France, is familiar with the buildings and art treasures of those countries, and is deeply concerned with their fate.

Mr. Walter Beberich, A.B., A.M., studied in Germany, came to the United States in 1926, and to Westminster in 1933. He is an ordained Baptist minister. The German prof is looking forward to the end of the war when he can take some of his more interested students to visit Germany where they can put his teachings to practical use.

"Buenos Dias, senorita," may be your greeting from Spanish professor T. R. Wiley, A.B., A.M., new instructor this year. His experiences in Europe, Mexico, and South America form a more personal, concrete touch for his classes.

Music Department—Westminster's Music Department is a separate and essential department of student curriculum. All "that noise" one hears issuing from the "conserv" represents as hard concentration and work as preparation for calculus class, for that half hour piano lesson is important in the future of a music major.

Director of the Conservatory, Mr. Donald O. Cameron, B.M., M.Ed., teaches violin, theory, and harmony classes besides directing the college band and orchestra. Other members of the music faculty are Miss Dorothy Kirkbride, B.M., A.M., M.A., piano, counterpoint, music history instructor; Mr. Alan B. Davis, voice instructor and director of the a Capella choir; Miss Ada Peabody, B.M., A.M., teacher of music methods, and director of Girls' Glee Club. Replacing the late Dr. Gordon Balch Nevin, composer and organ instructor is Mr. Clyde English, organist at Sixth Presbyterian Church in Pittsburgh. Part time instructors include members of the Youngstown Symphony Orchestra and Mr. Dallmeyer Russell of Pittsburgh Musical Institute, teacher of piano.

News Bureau—"Keep Westminster on the map" is the News Bureau's slogan. Typewriters click, addressographs klump, telephones buzz while Mr. Michael Radock, college publicity director, thinks up new ideas to keep Westminster in the favorable eye of the public. Assistants Doris Klein, Jean Brown and Paul Krakowski are kept busy typing stories about Towering Titan victories, fraternity elections, and professors' idiosyncrasies.

Newstips about students' part time jobs and absent minded professors are continually being sent out by the News Bureau to the Associated and United Press for coast to coast distribution.

If your picture was in the paper when you helped pick apples last fall or when you helped in the War Fund campaign it was because the News Bureau was on the job. "Mike" and his assistants are kept busy snapping pictures of every college activity. They were on the spot when the sophomore journalism class put out the Globe and when Interfraternity's able fireman extinguished the "fire" in the organ loft during the organization's chapel program.

The News Bureau keeps a complete file of students' activities and majors and a pictorial and narrative record of Westminster with clippings from tri-state newspapers.

Secretarial Science Department—What's your major, secretarial science? So's mine. Lot of us, aren't there?

The answer to that one seems to be "meet the demand", and that's just exactly what the Secretarial Science department is doing with its accelerated program whereby requirements may be met in two years.

Head of the Secretarial Science department is Mr. Russell N. Cansler, B.S., L.L.B., M.A., who, although busy as Director of Army and Navy training program on campus, still had time to teach shorthand, and courses in methods of teaching commercial subjects. Mr. Robert F. Galbreath, Jr., B.B.A., teaches business English, bookkeeping, salesmanship and typing. Newcomer to the department is Miss Elsie Leffingwell, instructor of shorthand and office practice.

Science Department—Sounds of marching feet led to the Science hall where the Army boys, stationed on campus, spent much of their time. However the Science hall was not void of civilians, as men and women both spent afternoons in lab and returned with the smell of chemistry following.

The Physics Department alone spent more than seven hours a week on each ASTP man. Dr. James A. Swindler, A.B., A.M., Ph.D.; Dr. John G. Moorehead, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., aided by Dr. Donald C. Matthews, B.S., Ph.D., instructed army, navy, and civilians in the physical sciences.

Students are lead through the mysteries of Chemistry by Dr. Harlow Osgood, B.S., M.S., Ph.D., and Dr. Edward A. Metcalf, A.B., M.A., Ph.D., while they are familiar with Dr. Charles Freeman, Professor Emeritus, A.B., Ph.D., L.L.D., who is frequently seen strolling on campus and in the Science hall.

Biology students study comparative anatomy under the direction of Dr. Donald C. Matthews, and botany from Dr. Bert E. Quick, A.B., Ph.D., Bultenzorg Botanical Gardens, Java.

Speech Department Dr. Albert T. Cordray, A.B., A.M., Ph.D., known to his students as "Teacher," is head of the Speech Department and Director of the summer school program. All students who have attended school during the summer know what a splendid job he has done. Dr. Cordray has been with Westminster's faculty since 1928, teaching Speech, Stagecraft, and certain English Literature courses. Assistant to him this year is Donald Barbe, R.B., A.M., Speech Instructor.

Under the direction of Dr. Cordray and Mr. Barbe, the Little Theater has presented several plays, and the new radio club, WRW, Westminster Radio Workshop, was organized.

Physical Education Department—Westminster's Physical training program is in charge of Miss Lola Sewall, B.S., M.S.;

Coach Grover C. Washabaugh, B.S.; and Mr. Harold E. Burry, B.B.A., M.Ed.

Girls' first semester gym classes were held in New Wilmington's Community house under the instruction of Mrs. Glenn Taylor, A.B.; who was later replaced by Mrs. James Gahagan, B.S.

With the departure of the ASTP men from campus, girls' classes were resumed in the gym under the former army instructor, Mr. Burry. The strenuous army drills caused many aching muscles and weary bodies, but great interest was shown in the new program. Exercises, marching, basketball, mushball, swimming and other sports made up the sports program for women.

Seniors . . .

Seems odd that they're leaving us now, doesn't it, these people who have been here longer than any of us, have seen more of Westminster than most of us, have loved their life here with the rest of us? They have some irreplaceable memories of that life. They will always remember snowstorms, Madison Square Garden basketball games, spring violets at the Manse, football rallies, ice skating at the cut, May Day processions, comprehensives, fraternity house-parties. They can't forget that they cheered at a Mock Convention, danced at spring formals, sang in concerts, argued at a War Aims Conference, had bull sessions until three, acted in Little Theatre productions, acquired keys, pins, and white cards.

They have seen their friends go off in groups of twos and threes and twenties and thirties to join the armed forces. They have stood in gray dawn singing "Tell Me Why", helping their classmates form a permanent picture of Westminster. They have seen special graduation services in autumn and mid-winter.

They have watched the change from Westminster—peacetime—to Westminster—wartime, more consciously, perhaps, than the rest of us, and have cheerfully helped effect that change. But maybe to them it isn't a change. To them it will always be the place where they spent their happiest days—Westminster.

Shake with Prexie

Juniors . . .

President, Jim Caruso, Vice president, Bob Santelli,
Secretary, Virginia Ann Wolfe

Say Betts, it's been a long time since we were all together in T. house. Remember Homecoming in November '42 when we stayed up dyeing cheese cloth over the little gas stove in Dob's room for our decorations? That was our first and last real Homecoming.

Sorority and fraternity rushing was elaborate then—nothing like now. Remember the Sig Ep pledges—was it Rube?—pacing the bridge and announcing the time every five minutes. Don't think I'll ever forget Howdy Holschuh when the Kap pledges had to wear a girl's dress for a day. Howdy's in the Navy now, Northwestern, I think.

Fellas were living in Hillside and Jeffers then and college was normal—until December 7th, and from then on things began to be different. There was summer school for the first time, and our class began to get separated, some sophomores, and some half juniors.

Most of us put off our activities until we were sophomores, but then we went after places on the Holcad and Argo. Shorty Donaldson was diver on the swimming team, Ray Bower battled with the Titans. Marcie crowed for Hope in chapel—yes, Hope left, and so did Goldie, and many others whom we still think of as classmates. We went on picnics and had house parties and dances, stretching our imaginations over the gap from our lighthearted freshman year to the more serious times then and ahead.

Our junior year—three girls in a room, army men in Browne hall, fewer civilian men on campus, longer assignments, shortened term—only a few of the differences. We did our best to keep Westminster the same for those returning and those coming after us. Our fifth consecutive All-American Holcad was edited by Paul Krakowski, Helen Stafford took over the Argo, and Student Council head was Jim Caruso. We went to chapel oftener and listened harder, praying for those who left empty seats, and hoping for a speedy return.

Sophomores

As the first wartime freshman class last year, we found, as sophomores, even greater changes on the campus. We welcomed the army in Browne hall and the Sig Ep house, we learned the secrets of rushing and did a little rushing on our own. The sophomore girls banded together and petitioned for campus houses as their private dorms. We cheered as Chris Wagner came back to play basketball, and we cheered as many of the class of '46 men left for a bigger job.

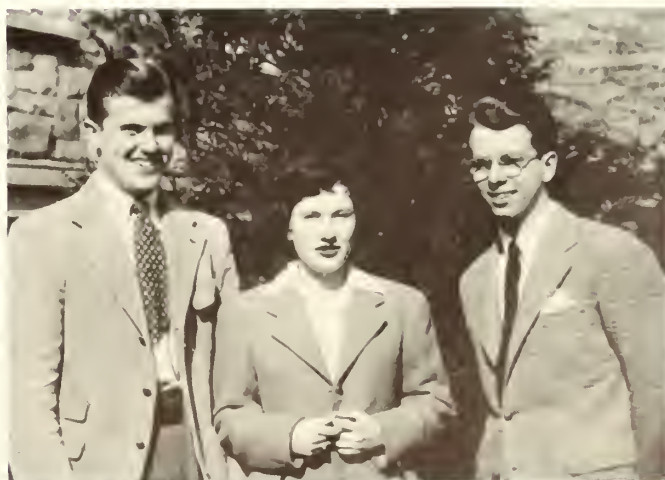

There were those who just had to come back for a visit, in different uniforms and bringing stripes, wings, bars, and medals back to New Wilmington. Among the Navy cadets stationed at Hillside were Jim Rush, George Conners, Ev Smith and Bill Laurie. To those who didn't get back, we wrote faithful accounts of Westminster to keep them in touch.

We took part in school activities with Ruth Stoehr on the Holcad, Harriet Sarver and Doris Dietz in the Little Theatre plays, and Shirley Nelson and Ruth Wright active on Student Council.

We were greatly aware of the war all the way through though when donating our blood, giving our money to war funds, when we received letters marked c o Post Office, New York City, and especially when Jim Carbines was lost in the South Pacific.

After a full year, we look forward to our return next year as juniors.

President Schuler, Secretary Sarver
and Vice President Cochran

Freshmen

"Dink, Frosh!" "I Janie Coed, admit your superiority and hereby tip my hat." We tipped our dinks, we praised Allah, we went to Tribunal, and then we were full-fledged freshmen, with Jim Hodges and Wilma Woods on Student Council; Fred Paine, class president; Jimmy Lee, vice-president; Polly Cochran, secretary; and Chuck Townsend, treasurer. Just before Christmas vacation, black-haired Joan Cypher was elected "Ideal Freshman." Our fellows went places too; Jorgensen, Paine, Little, Vitkovich, Davis, Wilson, Jarrett, and several others were on the Towering Titans' basketball team.

It was hard getting used to college life at first, but after that terrible homesickness disappeared and we began to make new friends, we really liked Westminster.

Then we were introduced to campus organizations and activities, YW and YM, WAA, Little Theater, the Holcad that came every Friday night, Senate, Student Council, and all the others. Later came sorority and fraternity pledging, and our first midnight frat serenades. We learned and loved "Tell Me Why" and the "Sweetheart" songs.

Sometime soon we shall be sophomores, but it is our freshman year we shall always remember, for it was then we found the true elements of college—the things that made us truly love Westminster.

President Jim Lee, Vice President Chuck Townsend, and Secretary Polly Cochran

Basketball . . .

About the only thing students, faculty, and district fans knew about the basketball situation when the season rolled around was that Westminster college would have a basketball team.

Seeing the towering freshmen strolling on the campus, Titan supporters didn't have to guess that this team would be one of the tallest in the college's history. As to the caliber of the freshmen, nothing could be told. When the season's opener drew near, fans in the district became inquisitive as to what Westminster college had to offer and the cagers became the "mystery giants".

There was only one veteran in the lineup when the Titans opened their season against Camp Reynolds. Captain Donald "Rube" Bennett, East Liverpool sophomore, was available to Coach Grover C. Washabaugh through a medical discharge from the army air corps.

Rest of the Titan strength came from freshmen and navy pre-flight trainees. At center, Westminster was represented by the tallest man in the district. Noble "Jorgy" Jorgensen, Pittsburgh freshman who comes from a well-known family of basketball players, had cinched the pivot post. Two freshmen unknowns, Dave Davis, smallest Titan starter at 6-foot 1-inch from Greensburg; and Edward Little, 6-foot 4-inch Duquesne freshman, were at the forward posts. Bennett handled a guard position along with Fred Paine, 6-foot 5-inch freshman from Hollidays Cove, W. Va.

At the start of the second semester in January, the Titans acquired the services of Chris Wagner, Connellsville sophomore, who had a medical discharge from the navy air corps. Henry Vitkovich, 6-foot 5-inch freshman from Ellwood City, and Gene Wilson, New Castle freshman, proved valuable to the Titan cause as reliable substitutes.

Briefly in the season, Westminster had the help of navy cadets. For the first five games, the Titans had on hand, Bob Artman, last year's Pitt sensation, and later on, George Lawry, Princeton standout, for three games.

Considering the inexperience of the Titan cagers, the season was termed successful with the record showing 11 victories and eight defeats. Westminster had to settle for second place in the district because of a poor showing on the road.

On the home floor the Titans could have given any team in the country a good fight. The home record for the season went unspoiled as the Washabaughmen took eight straight contests. It was a different story away from home. Out of 11 games on foreign courts, the local cagers only captured three.

Towering Jorgensen proved to be the most dangerous offensive threat. He gained the district high-scoring laurels with a total of 313 points in 19 games, an average of 16.5 points a game. At the season's close, "Jorgy" was picked on the All-District team and given honorable mention on an "All-American" team.

The Titans showed the other district teams that they were out for district supremacy by taking the first three games in impressive fashion. They had little trouble with Camp Reynolds in the opener, winning 46-29. Juniata almost put a dent in the Titan's perfect home record in the second game. Only a sensational second half spurt that netted 48 points saved the Titans and the locals won out in the final minutes, 71-63.

The Scotch of Carnegie Tech were in for a bad night when the Titans invaded Pittsburgh. Westminster had an easy time of it as they took their third straight encounter, 61-38.

Westminster got its first taste of defeat when it met Akron. With Fritz Nagy, brilliant Zipper forward, tossing them in from all corners, Akron shellacked the Titans, 69-44. The Titans then lost a heartbreaker to the Oklahoma Aggies at Buffalo, 41-39, in overtime. Inexperience cost the Titans the ball game.

But they snapped out of it in the next encounter with their "cousins", Coach Carlson's Pitt Panthers. With George Lawry, navy cadet, amassing 20 points, the Titans scored the highest total of the season by walking off with an 82-64 decision.

Coach Washabaugh's proteges were given a rude surprise by Camp Reynolds away from home. Clarence Butler scored 29 points to lead the Indians to a 64-45 trouncing. Bethany fell before the Titans' on the local court, 64-56, but Juniata avenged the previous setback with a 64-46 victory.

Westminster got hot and had a victory streak of four games before Bethany broke it. The Titans defeated Wash-Jeff, 46-39; Geneva 66-58; Pitt, 58-54; and Carnegie Tech, 69-54. In the Pitt game, Jorgensen scored 30 points, just two shy of the Pitt Stadium record.

Bethany proved unbeatable on their small floor and handed the Titans a 54-35 lacing with Knoche scoring 30 points for the opponents. Fans rated the Titans on par with some of Westminster's great teams in the Akron game. Putting on their best game of the season, the Titans walked over a strong Akron aggregation, 76-54, in their last home appearance.

After leading by a 36-28 count in the first half, Westminster scored only 12 points in the second half and handed Geneva a 58-48 decision. Brooklyn was taken next, 58-50, at Madison Square Garden, but the Titans lost the district crown when the W and J Prexies won, 58-49. The season ended with Oklahoma U. trouncing Westminster, 54-36 at Buffalo.

This was the team at the season's start, with the navy boys and the freshmen, Manager T. Rube, the only veteran, and Coach, beginning another year with the Titans. The ASTP fellows weren't allowed to help out the varsity, but they had their own clashes with the navy, with Camp Reynolds, and with other AST Units in the district. They opposed the Navy cadet team in preliminaries at home games. And they came to watch the games, adding a strong male note to the cheers that helped our team win all 8 home games.

The cheers were helped out, too, by Shirley Nelson's squad, which included freshmen Jim Hodges, Ann Babbitt, Lorry Brown, Jean Lower, Vonnice Rowe, Lois Burton, and sophomore Mary Alsop. The cheerleaders, too, organized pep rallies, and whipped up a big homecoming bonfire when the team came home from the Gardens.

The spirit was right: the spirit of the army, of the navy, of the coeds, of our fellows. And it was all these individual spirits working together that made the year all right, that made it as good as any season yet.

Intramurals . . .

Beginning of the college year in September was followed by an announcement from the athletic council that football had been abandoned for the duration because of the manpower shortage. With no sports in prospect for students, faculty, and townspeople until the beginning of the basketball season in mid-December, Wayne Christy, Bible instructor, arranged a touch football league.

Competition soon developed among the ASTP trainees, navy aviation cadets, and civilian students. Each of these three groups was represented by a nine-man team and all games were scheduled for Saturday afternoons. The college team, coached by Mr. Christy, even arranged away games with Grove City, neighboring college.

When the short season ended, the ASTP squad, made up of former college grid players, was out in front, having defeated both the college squad and the naval cadets. The college civilian team, after losing to the navy cadets and army trainees by one touchdown margins, traveled to Grove City and split a two-game series with the opponents.

Girls' Sports

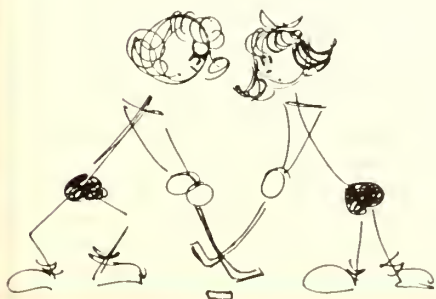

In spite of the fact that the gym was unavailable, girls' sports were as popular as in previous years. In the fall, hockey, volleyball, badminton and archery were played out-of-doors. During the winter, the girls frequented the bowling alleys, and made use of the pool and gym one night a week. Inter-sorority basketball and mushball were featured second semester.

The Women's Athletic Association was organized in 1931 to promote athletics, to create a love of sports, and to foster the ideal of good sportsmanship on Westminster's campus. Any undergraduate woman with an academic average of C, is eligible for membership after she has earned the required number of points for entrance, has passed the entrance exam, and has been approved by the executive board.

Founded by students sixty years ago to "carry the spirit and news of Westminster to the ends of the earth," the Holcad is now more than ever fulfilling its original purpose. Almost every afternoon and evening Carolyn Dines, circulation manager, and Jim Sidey, business manager replacing graduate Kenneth Cain, can be found down in the Holcad office, a giant jar of paste in front of them, addressing and sealing more than 800 copies of this student newspaper, sent to Westminster servicemen in camps throughout the nation and battlefields in every corner of the world. Each week letters come back from these former students with thanks for this link between them and school. Prexy's column, included in the special serviceman's issue that goes to press immediately after the campus edition, sends a personal message—bits about those who have come back to visit, those still at classes here, and familiar sights like Old Main Tower and Hillside.

For the past four years the Holcad has been awarded a superior All-American rating by the National Collegiate Press Association. The office down in McGill library is filled with the clicking of typewriters as Joan Simpson, news editor, and Ruth Stoehr, feature editor, add last minute changes to their stories. Helen Stafford struggles with a head for her society column, while Genevieve Douglas and Naomi Himmeger, copy editors, read over stories slipped into the office just before the deadline. Eleanor Berry, finished with her sports column, lends a hand to those who try desperately to find short enough words for headlines. Perplexed by problems in anything from news gathering to proofreading, the staff seeks the advice of Doris Klein, managing editor, whose experience as editor-in-chief last year has made her a valuable counselor. An added feature to this year's Holcad was the Army-Navy page edited by Jean Brown and Mary Alsop in cooperation with the military staffs at the college.

It keeps Editor Krakowski busy straight through the week hunting assignments for reporters, seeing that all copy is checked and up at the Globe before noon Friday, and catching last minute mistakes before the copy is "put to bed."

With an almost completely inexperienced staff plus printing and engraving difficulties and delays the 1945 Argo was faced with the hard task of putting out a yearbook that would measure up to Westminster's previous yearbooks.

From the darkroom in the library and the office in Old Main the entire staff gathered together material, pictures, and cartoons for the makings of an annual.

Editor Stafford wrestled with dummy sheets and engraving proofs while assistant editor Jean Brown was always on hand to help. Sports editor Paul Krakowski managed to put together the sports section even though there were so few athletics. Literary editors Eleanor Berry and Jane Greer spent the year hunting up assignments for their large staff of writers and succeeded in collecting, assembling, and editing all the written material.

The photographic staff, consisting of Alf Laing, Paul Samaras, George Munn, and Helen Stafford had to do every picture that went into the book. They deserve a vote of thanks for the many nights they spent in the dark room, developing and printing.

Agnes Jackson and her staff made the rounds of New Castle, Sharon, Youngstown, and New Wilmington to gather advertising while business manager Tom McIntire looked to the finances.

This year's editorial staff selected the beauty section of the book. They were the first staff to take all the individual pictures. It was only through the cooperation of student body that this year's wartime edition of the Argo was made possible.

Make-up artists dab worried, last-minute puffs of powder on plastic noses, stage hands mutter darkly about somebody "messaging with those lights," the leading lady's silk scarf for the first scene hides in some obscure corner, and one of the ushers dashes in to announce that they have run out of programs. With five minutes before curtain time "Teacher" sheds the traditional white smock and gathers a worried cast for a calm talk which somehow ends with a promise of annihilation for the person who slams a door backstage. With a hasty flurry, lights dim, actors take places, and the curtains part. The play is on and what is going to happen will happen. Will the blue vase break when it should? Will we miss that same speech again? Will the wedding march record start on time? Nobody knows, but each breathes a small prayerful sigh that he not be the person at fault. While the story moves along on stage, lights dim and brighten according to plan, properties are reported missing and found ten times before being thrust into the clammy paws of a frightened freshman making his first college appearance, and actors waiting for cues display various reactions. Some mumble lines crazily, others ask each other why they ever thought they could do this, and one even takes deep knee bends before entering for a love scene.

Little

Sentimental comedy, drama, and farce were included in the first program of three short plays presented in November. "'Op O' Me Thumb" told of a little "'op o' me thumb" of a Cockney working girl whose imaginary love appears. Amanda's explanations quite perplexed kind-hearted but simple Horace; however, although the "love's young dream" pattern is not strictly adhered to, a gold stick pin and a kiss help soften the disappointment. Ann Babbitt and Eugene Yarnell, playing the leads, were ably supported by Esther Albanese, Elizabeth Beattie, Jeanne Brow, and Barbara Peters.

Complications of moving provided the humor for "Hugo In a Hurry," a farce. Henry Sparks, scientific moving man (Alfred Heasty) was troubled by his love-sick helper Hugo (Warwick Hutchison), and the necessity of a "split moving" because of the Butlers' (George Munn and Gloria Albertson) separation. More trouble was caused by the villainous uplift of society (Janet Evarts), and Letty, the inefficient maid (Hilda McDowell).

Audiences of "Double Door" watched intently as the authority of a tyrannical woman was broken. Victoria Van Bret (Harriet Sarver, Virginia Williams) hated the wife her young half-brother (Charles Murray, Paul Musser) had chosen and did all possible to ruin the marriage. She accused Dr. John Sully (Warwick Hutchison) of being a lover of Rip's wife Anne (Doris Dietz, Gloria Albertson) rather than a friend and had him shadowed by a detective (Douglas Stewart). Tiffany's man with the Van Bret pearls (Alfred Heasty) and the family lawyer (Eugene Cornford) are both bullied by Victoria, as are all the servants (James Hodges, Harriet Fehm and Louise Denniston, Marie Brindle and Barbara Peters, and Loretta Wilson and Lee Wilkinson). At the very last moment Anne is saved from suffocation through Victoria's action by the statement of the timid Van Bret sister Caroline (Gladys Brown, Bonnie McCracken) who thus reveals her sister as an attempted murderess. In the final scene Victoria sits before the open double door of the secret vault, fingering the famous Van Bret pearls like an insane person.

The spring production was an all girl play called "Brief Music" which followed seven girls through three years of college. Spiff, a very capable girl (Harriet Boozell, Peggy Newcomb) and Drizzle, a shy, unsure, but talented person (Shirley Nelson, Ruth Wright) were roommates their sophomore year, along with glamorous lovely (Evelyn Crooks, Gloria Albertson) who married and does not return. The rest of the gang which frequented the room consisted of frivolous Minnie (Grace Jones, Dolores Vice), Maggie, the reformer (Nancy Slinker, Barbara Peters), editor Rosey (Mary Ellen Stewart, Lorraine Brown) and Jinx (a misfit (Mary Weber, Elizabeth Beattie). Troubles begin when Spiff and Drizzle fall in love with the same professor, but things really start to happen when Drizzle's poetry is published and the administration disapproves.

SCRAWL

"Westminster in the War" was the theme for this year's first issue of Scrawl, student literary publication, with articles, essays, and poems contributed by the AST cadets then on campus and a deep brown cover to carry out the GI effect.

Scrawl has recently become a member of the NSPA (National Scholastic Press Association) and now has the right to wear the emblem of membership on its title page.

Y. M. C. A.

A life physically, mentally, socially, and spiritually rounded is the aim of the officers of the Young Men's Christian Association for the boys who meet together each Wednesday evening. The announcement may read—"Come to the bowling alleys uptown",—"at 6:45 at the Conservatory of Music for a discussion of 'War Marriages' "—"college woods tonight." But whatever it is, the announcement aims toward a well rounded life with Christian ideals as its center and main goal. Maybe there aren't as many of them as usual, but they are out for something deep and fine in campus life.

This spring members of YMCA donated a Christian Flag to the college chapel.

Y. W. C. A.

"All girls are invited to attend, Ferguson Hall lounge, 6:45 p.m." Each Wednesday in Chapel these words form an invitation to girls for a mid-week service of quiet reverence and worship. It helps remedy lots of things—a 65 in an American History six weeks' exam; the loss of a favorite roommate; no word from New Guinea for four weeks. Then it's YW that provides a big sister for each new girl on campus, helps choose the May Court, and sponsors more than one philanthropic activity throughout the United States and the world. Working with a cabinet of thirteen members, Jan Hendrickson directs the activities of the college Christian Association for Young Women.

International Relations Club

International Relations Club has been busy keeping up with events during the last year. The club meets once every two weeks and discusses problems of current interest, such as "Russia's attitude toward the Balkans," "The U. S. foreign policy in Argentine and Bolivia," and "Great Britain and the Second Front."

These topics are chosen by the I. R. C. Steering Committee which includes Jean Brown, Joan Graham, Betty Lou Moreland, Gilbert Swindler, and president Hilda McDowell.

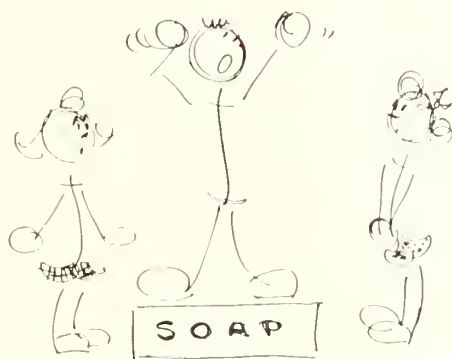

Jan Hendrickson, graduating senior and president of I. R. C. during the first semester, and Hilda McDowell represented the club at an I. R. C. conference of the Middle Atlantic colleges in Baltimore this fall.

Membership in the club is open to all those interested in foreign affairs.

WRW

Quiet! We're on the air! This is station WRW, coming to you under the auspices of the speech and music departments, under the direction of Dr. Albert T. Cordray, Mr. Donald Barbe, Mr. Donald O. Cameron, Professor Allen B. Davis, and Mr. Michael Radock.

This year a great many students took part in radio programs, recording for the purpose of broadcasting The Necklace and The Far-Away Princess, and selections by the orchestra and the A Cappella Choir. They have learned how to converse in radio sign language, how to be radio technicians, how to be successful announcers, how to broadcast. They have had a lot of fun doing it, but, more important, they have re-established radio training on the campus.

Quadrangle

Quadrangle, Westminster's organization for independent women, is fast becoming one of the strongest organizations on campus. Its activities during the past year included the stuffing of animals for British children; a Servicenter musical program; the meeting planned by the freshman committee where we played Korean games and heard Ray Lutz, who has lived in Korea, describe the life and customs of the people there.

Then there was the meeting at which Miss McNeill told us about the evacuee children in England; the initiation meeting for new members, the bowling party, the contribution of symphony scores to the library for the Pi Sig drive, the record meeting, and the dinners, the waffle supper, and the ice cream we had at the homes of our sponsors, Mrs. Leon Marshall and Mrs. Neil McNall.

Quadrangle officers are: president, Ada McCleery; vice president, Thelma Plake; secretary, Virginia Newell; treasurer, Edna Friggle.

Quadrangle members include: Frances Clarke, Polly Critchlow, Carlyn Dawson, Genevieve Dick, Caroline Dines, Mary Duff, Edna Friggle, Gloria Hay, Dorothy Hefner, Ardel Herzog, Janet Hill, Millie Kelso, Rachel Lutz, Marie Lutsch, Ada McCleery, Rebecca McKnight, Marian McNary, Helen Miller, Betsy Naugle, Virginia Newell, Mary Ellen Newton, Betty Jane Nickerson, Kit Orr, Thelma Plake, Jeanne Ringer, Janet Rote, Virginia Russell, Louise Scott, and Marjory Smith.

Senate

Senate, made up of a group of representatives from each girl's dormitory, is the governing body for Westminster coeds.

Early in the fall Senate reorganized and revised their constitution so that most of the legislative power in connection with coed rules rests in their hands.

Senate sponsored the first big event of the season, the Leap Year Formal in February, and in the spring held an Easter egg hunt.

Officers are: Annabelle Hughes, president; Helen Stafford, vice president; Doris Dietz, secretary; Hilda McDowell, treasurer.

Pan-Hellenic Council

Pan-Hellenic, or Pan Hel as it is commonly called, has the task of dealing with any problems which may arise among the sororities. Composed of two representatives from each of the six sororities on campus, it makes and enforces the rules for rushing.

Aside from the Council's judicial duties, other activities included the annual pre-rushing tea for freshmen girls in November and a dance at the Servicenter in the spring.

The officers are: Harriet Behm, president; Jane Sinewe, vice president; Kathryn Wilcox, secretary; and Florence Menoher, treasurer.

Inter-Fraternity Council

Inter-Fraternity Council is organized each year to promote harmonious inter-fraternity relations and to deal with inter-frat problems among fraternities. The Council is made up of two members from each of the three fraternities on campus.

The major function sponsored by the Council this year was the Inter-Fraternity dance, held in the college gym because of difficulties in transportation.

Officers for this year were Don Bennett, president; Jim Caruso, vice president; and Paul Musser, secretary-treasurer.

Student Council

"We want organization!" "We want more power." "We want" seemed to be the by-word of most Westminster men and women most of the past year. But now Student Council, student governing body, is reorganized, and has impressed the students with the fact that they must stand behind the council if they want results. Thus with a little cooperation from all sides, we may have an active student government.

Jim Caruso served as president, Ruth Wright as secretary, and Bob Santelli as treasurer.

Student Religious Groups at Westminster

Religion, always a big part of the Westminster tradition, has grown stronger in a war year when other features of college life have changed so much. Life Service was organized only this year by those who have dedicated their lives to Christ. Christian Endeavor, United Presbyterian Young People's Group, and Wesley Fellowship, Methodist group, met every Sunday evening for a pre-chapel hour of discussion. They raised funds for various worthy causes throughout the year.

Gospel teams went to district churches to take complete charge of Sunday services. Soloists as well as speakers were included in programs presented by these teams, who were much in demand. Pre-ministerial students thus gained first-handed experience.

Target

Target, senior women's honorary, lost all but one of its members during the second semester because of mid-year graduation. New members are chosen on the basis of scholarship, a two average being required, activities, character, and leadership. Seven members are the maximum allowed for Target.

Officers are: Lucille Dimon, president; Anne Boliver, vice president; Jeanne Snowden, secretary; Ruth Greiner, treasurer; and Jan Hendrickson, historian.

Scroll

Scroll, honorary English fraternity, is still tapping those on campus seriously interested in literature and writing. The only requirements for membership for the pursuers of Byron and Melville are twelve hours of English credit and a 2 average in the courses.

For the past several years, under the sponsorship of Dr. Mary Purdy and Dr. Virginia Everett, Scroll has been collecting the books of Margaret Deland and Agnes Sligh Turnbull, Western Pennsylvania authors.

Members gather monthly at the home of the club's sponsors. The meetings are enlivened with book reviews and original manuscripts prepared by the students.

A book is awarded by the club to the student making the outstanding record in the freshman English course.

Membership includes Eloise Lowry, president; Lucille Semple, vice president; Marjorie Hazen, secretary; Doris Klein, treasurer; Helen Stafford, Jean Brown, Louise Denniston, Virginia Williams, Lucie Dimon, Marion Hendrichson, Jane Kaufman, Ann Boliver, Betty Erickson, and Naomi Himmeger.

Tau Kappa Alpha

Tau Kappa Alpha, national honorary debate fraternity, was restricted this year by war-time conditions, which hampered plans for inter-collegiate debates. Members of the club provided speakers for Rotary and Kiwanis club and Young People's organizations.

Newcomb, Kramer

Fay, Klein

Sceptre

Sceptre, sophomore women's honorary fraternity, has come through its second year on Westminster's campus with great success. The girls have set themselves to the task of "stimulating interest in scholarship, leadership, participation in activities, and development of character among freshman women." To carry out this plan they entertained the freshmen women in three different groups at the Servicenter. At those entertainments they explained the purpose of Sceptre and they set up a goal for which the freshmen are to strive. Sceptre is preparing for entrance into Cwens, the national sophomore honorary.

Sceptre has elected Dorothy Pollock as president, Dorothy Yount, vice president; Hilda McDowell, secretary; and Harriet Sarver, treasurer.

Pi Delta Epsilon

Members of Pi Delta Epsilon, national journalism fraternity, are required to have worked two years on a college publication, one of these in an executive position. Organized on Westminster's campus in 1934, Pi Delta Epsilon publishes the Information Please, a student directory, and the Yearling, freshman handbook.

This year, the honorary dedicated to the college the Westminster service flag now hanging in the chapel. Purchases of war bonds were continued. An initiation banquet was held in October, and in May, Pi Delt sponsored the annual publications dinner.

Faculty sponsor is Mr. Michael Radock, professor of journalism; Paul Krakowski is president, and Doris Klein is secretary-treasurer.

Delta Nabla

Delta Nabla, honorary mathematics fraternity, was founded at Westminster in 1928 to promote interest in mathematics on this campus. Each year, the fraternity presents a book to the freshman with the highest grade in mathematics; and sponsors a picnic supper for freshmen math majors and pre-engineering students. In the spring, Delta Nabla has an initiation banquet followed by a movie. Delta Nabla publishes annually "The Deltoid", which contains mathematical news, reports of thesis, and articles by former members.

President this year was Tom McIntire; Virginia Newall, vice president; Irene Solomon, secretary-treasurer.

ALPHA IOTA

Alpha Iota, international honorary business sorority, is composed of commercial majors who have completed twelve hours in the department with a "B" average.

The annual initiation banquet was held at the Tavern in February with the secretarial instructors and the regional counselor as guests. Members conducted a survey of former students' experiences to aid in departmental planning for more efficient secretaries and commercial teachers.

Officers are: President, Louise Denniston (1st semester) and Judy Cooke; vice president, Doris Wilkins; secretary, Barbara Doyle; treasurer, Joan Graham.

Masquers

Masquers, honorary dramatics fraternity, is composed of not more than fourteen men and women, who have been outstanding in the work of the Little Theatre, and have earned the number of points required for consideration as a member of Masquers.

During National Drama Week in February, Masquers sponsored a series of activities which included recordings from "Abe Lincoln in Illinois" in a chapel program and the presentation of a one-act play in the Little Theatre on Wednesday afternoon.

Officers are: Harriet Behm, president; Shirley Nelson, vice president; Harriet Sarver, secretary-treasurer.

Karux

"He's a pre-min!" So that these words will be spoken with growing respect, the honorary fraternity for pre-ministerial students has been organized. Certain high standards of scholarship and leadership must be demonstrated before membership is extended.

"To spread a Christian spirit on campus" may be a conventional phrase to some; to Karux it is a challenge—to be met now.

Officers are: Warwick Hutchinson, president; James Shott, vice president; Charles Book, secretary-treasurer.

Pi Sigma Pi

Pi Sigma Pi, the scholastic honorary on Westminster's campus, requires, for membership, a 2.4 average with seventy-five hours credit towards the B.S. or B.A. degree.

Twice a year, Pi Sig holds honors convocation for those having a 2.5 average or better the past semester, and hoping someday to become a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa, conducts an annual book drive for the library.

Officers are: Jim Hares, president; Joan Simpson, secretary-treasurer and chairman of the book drive.

Kappa Delta Pi

Kappa Delta Pi is the national honorary education fraternity composed of students who maintain a "B" or 2 average. Ten new members were honored by a dinner at the Tavern the beginning of the year at which Mr. Robert F. Galbreath, Jr. was the speaker. Other speakers at the monthly meetings were Mrs. Neil McNall and Mr. Carroll Leeds.

Delta Mu chapter of Kappa Delta Pi again sponsored their annual basketball game between the faculty men and town men. In the spring, a dinner was given for the students who were practice teaching in nearby schools.

Officers are: Ruth Greiner, president first semester; Lucille Semple, president second semester; Lillian Semple, secretary; Marjorie Hazen, treasurer.

Outing Club

Outing Club, an all-girl organization this year, started early in the fall to become an activity with promise, holding their harvest dance in October, and crowning Suzy Shannon as sophomore Harvest Queen.

In the spring, Outing club members planned a series of hikes for Saturday afternoons.

Officers are: Thelma Plake, president; Sophie Anastas, vice president; Helen Bird, secretary; Virginia Newall, treasurer.

Music

Introduction

Although the "Conserv" is the scene of endless hours of practice and study for the music major, it is merely "that building with all the noise" to other students. But the music student loves this long, many-windowed building and is not conscious of the noise of pianos, wind instruments, and future soloists as he goes about his daily practice—or is he?

It is when Mr. Cameron strikes a chord and asks the inevitable question that the music student secretly dislikes the noisy piano next door or the loud organ down the hall. Perhaps he stands aghast at the trim looking figure in shorts on her way to Miss Peabody's special phys ed class. Then there's the class of prospective grade school teachers playing dumb while a sister student acts as "teacher" for the day. All of the noise and interruptions go into the making of a music major's day in the "Conserv," while underneath all, there is the memory of and the sadness for good Doctor Nevin—our organist, organ teacher, and symbol of that mysterious "life devoted to music." Yes, our music is part of us and part of Westminster's campus.

Girls' Glee Club

Remember the beautiful Thanksgiving candlelight service in chapel and the ever-popular "Indian Love Call" that you stopped to listen to in the "Conserv"? Remember the rush for practice at 4:15 on Wednesday—or aren't you acquainted with the Girl's Glee Club? Presenting a variety of choral music from the religious to the folk song, Miss Peabody's budding Metropolitans have given us real evidence of their fine work in their successful Spring Concert.

A Cappella

Nancy's at the piano, Mr. Davis is directing, and it's the A Cappella choir about to render your favorite "Night and Day." For one hour on Tuesday, Room 17 in the "Conserv" is taken over by the cream-of-the-crop in feminine vocal chords and we are whisked away on a tour of the song book. Seniors and juniors remember the tours over the countryside, but the rest of us remember the day Jim Caruso took over.

Band

For the organization that gets there "fustest with the mostest" we'll take the band. As it nears five o'clock on Mondays and Fridays it's the music of the band that reminds us of Retreat. When the gym lights up and the crowds appear, it's the band's rendition of "Ring Out the Bells" that gets that old basketball spirit tingling. Of course, regular practice does it, and how well the students and army cadets know it. Caruso and Olly Ohsberg keep things lively, as do our high-stepping majorettes—Joyce Hagadorn, Joan Cypher, Mary Alsop, Oly Mae Wall, Ethel McDonald, and Lu Moreland (let's not forget Lu's stick twirling at the half during basketball games.) Dependable is the word for the band—hats off to Mr. Cameron, director.

Orchestra

Listen, do you hear someone tuning a violin? Can it be a bassoon I hear wailing? Well, wouldn't you know—it's Tuesday evening and orchestra night. Strains of "The Student Prince" reach our ears and before we know it it's Room 17 again and Mr. Cameron's faithfuls. Do I see army cadets too? Joy in playing good music together and the perfection of their artistic qualities are the primary elements of the orchestral organization and a fine one it is.

War was no stranger this year to the campus of Westminster, when khaki-clad soldiers mingled with civilian students, used the same classrooms, slept in college dorms, and received instruction from regular college profs. With the arrival of 300 soldier-students, Westminster started to play its part in the Army Specialized Training Program in mid-August. Captain Edward W. Davis, commanding officer, and Lts. Carl Marcuson and William Robertson, executive officers, were in charge of the 3324th AST unit on the campus. Courses offered were for basic engineering, the weekly schedule including 24 hours of classroom work, 5 hours of military science, and six hours of physical education. When the boys left, in March, they left behind them memories, and took with them all the luck we could wish them.

In January, 1943, the first contingent of Navy Cadets arrived at the USS Hillside from the University of Pennsylvania, under the Civil Aeronautics Authority War Training Service. Here they had elementary flight training, then went on to Chapel Hill. Though at first the regular college faculty was used, the subjects were later taught entirely by a specialized staff of instructors. College-furnished station wagons hauled cadets to New Castle's Wilson airport for a total of 25 hours of flight training, sometimes lengthened by 18 additional hours. 240 hours of ground school instruction included only courses having a direct bearing on aviation or aviation training, such as Civil Air Regulation, Navigation, Recognition, Aerology, Communications and Physical education. Hillside, housing the cadets, was entirely self-sustaining and truly a naval station in every sense of the word. The last of the trainees left in August of '44; they were the last of the armed forces stationed here.

Dear Ed.

We won't kid ourselves and say that nothing has changed since last year. Both college life and fraternity life weren't what they used to be, but we didn't do badly considering——

You remember the Kap house was open the time you dropped in during your furlough. It still is, Ed. And you noticed that the boys had finished painting the inside of the house from top to bottom.

When school began there were only Kenny Cain, Alf Laing, Lefty Krakowski, Tom McIntire, and Harry Bell living in the house. Harry was the only one left of the 50 men we pledged last year. They're all in the service. Only other actives were George Kramer, Eldon Sturrock, Thayer's brother; and Paul Samaras.

We pledged Bill Shaefer, Bob's brother; Jim Lee, Jim Sidey, George Munn, and Dale Pilz during the fall; and Louis Eadie, Bob Crowe, and Frank Tiberio in the spring. Before school was out, Shaefer, Sturrock and Pilz were in the service.

We were all kept pretty busy. Kenny, the president was running around for ads and finishing his thesis; Alf was taking all the individual pictures for the Argo; Tom was handling army labs and running errands for Mrs. Cal in the Kap car; and Lefty was always down in the Holcad office working on the "All-American" Holcad. Incidentally, Lefty was elected president after Kenny graduated, and then when he left to become editor of his hometown paper, Tom took over.

Our social program was limited to two house parties and a Thanksgiving dinner, but we held a few open house affairs. We tried for more, but no soap. But we had some of our own parties when Kaps in service would get liberties or furloughs. Of course, we'd stay up all night reminiscing about the good old days.

Be seeing you soon.

Your Kap Brothers

Alpha Sigma Phi

As in all other college activity, the war also had a very definite effect on fraternity life. Alpha Sigma Phi started the school year with only 6 actives and 3 pledges, but the incoming freshman were rushed and 12 new pledges were added.

Alpha Sig held its own in the campus activity—Fred "Stoop" Paine freshman basketball star, caused plenty of excitement on the court and made long shots look like a very simple flip of the wrist. Presidents of the freshman, sophomore, and junior classes were Fred Paine, Scoop Schuler, and Jim Caruso respectively with Chuck Townsend, Norm Cochran, and Bob Santelli as aides in the roles of class treasurers.

Second semester found 9 new pledges. Student Council elected Jim Caruso as its head and the Navy's loss was our gain as Chris Wagner was discharged and returned to campus. In very short time he was keeping the fraternity reputation of having good basketball players.

A party in Pittsburgh, a formal dinner-dance, and numerous get-togethers with the other campus frats gave college life somewhat of that pre-war touch.

As long as there are a few men on campus . . . Alpha Nu of Alpha Sigma Phi will keep things rolling so that when the men in service return they will find things in good shape for their new life at Westminster.

Officers for the year were: Jim Caruso, president, Paul Musser, vice president, Chuck Murray, secretary, Norm Cochran treasurer.

Sigma Phi Epsilon

Gee, this year was queer at Westminster. No longer was the house on Furnace Hill a place that we could call our own. Over the door hung a sign—"Army Barracks No. 3", and ASTP men "studied" in our rooms. Of course, we missed those unforgettable house parties, the third floor barracks, and eating at the house, but we still carried on. We had a room in the bank building for a club room and a meeting place. Although there was no football this year six Pennsylvania Lambdans held their own on the varsity basketball. Jorgensen was the only district man to be given honorable mention on the 1943-44 All-American basketball selections. During the year five men left for the services and several more will be leaving soon.

It surely will be wonderful to return to the house next year and to plan for the great reunion we are all expecting after the war.

Officers are: Don Bennett, president; Tom Turner, vice president; Keith Kingsbury, secretary; Bob Kennedy treasurer.

Actives: Ray Bower, Pat Gleeson, Don Haight, Jack McDaniel, Harold Yost.

Dear Diary,

Now that school is over for another year, it's great to look back on the '43-'44 season for AGD. As soon as we got back on campus this fall, we initiated Ruth Baynham, Patricia Ginn, and Nancy Jarrett. To benefit the work of the New Castle Blood Bank, we sponsored the first Open House of the year. Then Suzy Shannon was crowned Harvest Queen at the Outing Club dance at the Servicenter. In the few busy weeks before Christmas vacation, we gave rush parties in the suite, we pledged 22 freshmen, and following pledging, actives and pledges were guests of our patroness, Mrs. E. B. Russell, for dinner at the Tavern. During Christmas vacation we met in Pittsburgh for dinner and a movie in true war-widow fashion. Our pledges were hostesses at the traditional pledge tea in February. The annual Spring Carnival followed spring vacation—it was our big formal for the year, Diary, and we crowned our "Pledge Princess" too. Before this semester was completed, our pledge class went active, making Alpha Gam stronger than ever before.

That's all for this year,

A. G. Delta

Beta Sigma Omicron

"Oh Mac! Our patronesses are having a tea for actives and pledges Friday afternoon. Can you come?" "Janey's wedding was just beautiful, you should have seen her!" "Let's see, what shall we do for entertainment at the Servicer?" "Wasn't that a nice party the pledges gave for us?—even if we did have to wear red horns all evening!" "How much money can we give to the War Chest? Better make it high." "Four alums were on campus last week-end. Did you see them?" "How much did we give the settlement school last year? Let's see—."

Go into Room 204, 205, or 206 in Ferguson hall for snatches of conversation like this. Or perhaps you'll hear—"Deep in my heart are thoughts of you" as the sextet practices Meg and Brownie's new song, "Beta Sig Man". Maybe you'll see Zip being the center of attraction with the usual witty remarks. Each Monday at 6:45 the new white bed spreads in the middle room are completely concealed by 25 girls laughing and chatting, then becoming quiet for the solemnity of the ritual—in Beta Sisterhood.

Officers: Gladys Brown, president; Doris Wilkens, vice president; Betty Tarr, secretary, Sophie Anastas, treasurer.

Seniors: Carolyn Clements, Elizabeth Gibson, Dorothy Stein.

Chi Omega

After dinner on Monday the Chi O's stroll into the lounge until time for sorority meeting. With very little encouragement, Izzy and Gordo agree to play their unique piano rendition of "Chopsticks." When the McKelvey house girls arrive everyone dashes to the third floor suite, where the Penthouse trio, Zeigler, Gordon, and Boles, are busy entertaining anyone that will listen with the latest news from Elliott house.

Zona breaks up the confusion by calling everyone into the next room for the meeting. When the formalities of the meeting are over, Judy announces that the pledges are planning a party for the actives. At this announcement nothing can be heard but shouts of "When?" . . . "Are we going to have food?" With a sharp rap of her gavel, Zona restores the meeting to order.

Planning for the coming Servicenter program, it's finally settled that Janet and Pud will work up a song, and Jane Shepherd will sing, "Begin the Beguine". Eunice is made chairman of the food committee with Dorrie Stoner to help.

The meeting is brought to a solemn close and formality reigns. Then, there is a mad dash for trench coats, dressers are stampeded as Chi O's comb their hair, tie their scarves, and add a touch of lipstick . . . and perhaps a dash of Sinewe's cologne, if she isn't looking.

The freshmen hurry to their rooms and the others, arm in arm, laughing, making plans, and some singing softly, "Chi Omega Yours Forever" start down the stairs.

Officers: Zona Brokash, president; Martha Neville, vice president; Dorothy Blackadore, secretary; Ann Radulovic, treasurer.

Seniors: Louise Danley, Jeanne Brow, Jane Sinewe. Juniors: Arlene Beighley, Martha Brown, Dorothy Blackadore.

Freshmen: Marie Bauman, Joyce Hagadorn, Jeanne Lower, Margaret Minter, Barbara Peters.

Pledges: Jean Forrest, Betty Lou Hamilton, Doris Stoner, Barbara Stanton, Marilyn Sutherland.

Another year is over and as we look back, we see what a truly wonderful and successful year we KD's have had. The war didn't stop us from having fun. We all got dresses alike and wore them on our Kappa Delta Homecoming Day. Many of our alumnae came, and we had a dinner at the Tavern. After dinner we had charge of the Servicer and put on a program. Believe me, it was quite a day.

In December, Mrs. Biberich, our patroness, had a picnic for us at her home. Then rushing came along. For our rush parties we all worked together and made little lambs as favors in green and white, the sorority colors. When rushing was over, we found we had gotten 13 wonderful pledges, and for the second year in a row, we got the Ideal Freshman coed, Joan Cypher, who succeeded Marilyn Dick.

Three of our officers graduated at mid-semesters, so we started the second semester off with a bang by electing new officers, and pledging Dorothy Cook and Mary Jane Fisher. During Spring vacation we all met in Pittsburgh, went to a movie, and then had dinner at the Gypsy Tea Room. We had initiation and dinner at the Tavern later in the spring.

As the chapter's war effort, we continued supporting Melvin Jones, a British refugee.

Swanson entertains.

Sigma Kappa

The lights are out and six luminous skeletons are seen vainly trying to dance in step to "I'll Be Down To Get You in a Taxi, Honey." With a final flourish, they dance out as "Aud" begins our sweetheart song. The lights go on—oh, it's the Sigma Kap program at the Servicer. That is just one of our memories as we look back on a year of good times, hard work, and new experiences. Numerous bridge parties in the suite, bowling, and dinners at the Tavern were high marks on our social calendar.

We were proud of our new pledges and gave them silver bracelets with the crest on them. Also we got a new patroness, Mrs. Gilbert Taylor.

Donations to war funds, the magazines for Service Men Drive, and Red Cross Blood Bank, and scrapbooks made by members were on our list of war work.

Helen Stafford as wartime Argo editor had quite a job on her hands; Flossie as "Mr. Anthony" added another character to chapel programs; Hilda McDowell, president of IRC; Ruthie Galbreath, last year's May Queen; and Clair Quigley and Jinny Wright candidates for "Ideal Freshman"—beauty, brains, and talent—shake 'em well and you have Sigmas.

Officers: Flossie Menoher, president; Alice Lou Laney, vice president; Jean Thompson, secretary; Marion Moore, treasurer.

Seniors: Thelma Critchfield, Ruth Galbreath, Ann Schmid, Jeanne Snowden.

Juniors: Eleanor Berry, Maxine Conway, Jean Giffen, Joan Graham, Ellen Parker, Ruth Slausenhaupt, Helen Stafford, Virginia Wolfe.

Sophomores: Marje Fleming, Hilda McDowell, Marion Moore, Jean Thompson, Roberta Clark, Elinor Linnen.

Freshmen: Barbara McConaha, Lynn Roemer, Virginia Wright.

Pledges: June Allen, Ann Babbitt, Lorraine Brown, Jane Gardner, Joan Glass, Claire Quigley, Jane McCullough, Isabel Moore, Jessie Smith.

First row: Laney, Slausenhaupt, Giffen, Graham, Stafford. Second row: McDowell, Berry, Thompson, Conway, Moore, Wolfe, Menoher, Parker.

Pledges: Mary Lou Stephens, Eleanor Silk.

Hi, there, Pat! How's your TU chapter this year? Well, Upsilon has been right on the ball too, from beginning to end. We started out with a bang, two diamonds, and seven fraternity pins. We proved that our members have heads as well as hearts by winning the scholarship cup for the third consecutive time, thus making it ours for keeps. And right here may I brag a bit about our seven organization presidents and our members who won recognition in cups and scholarships?

But all of our work isn't the brainy type. We have fun too. Almost as soon as school started Mrs. Downs entertained us at the Tavern, and we met at Mrs. Graebner's. Almost before we knew it we were planning our Rainbow program for the Servicenter, and then rushing was on. Our sixteen pledges did a good job of entertaining us with original poems and songs and a neat party at the Alpha Sig house. Some of us went to Akron for a big weekend with the TU'S at Akron U, and all of us enjoyed our get-togethers in the suite during the year.

We made our contributions to Berea, as usual, and to the WSSF. Our home-front situation was pretty well taken care of by public and private entertainment of the Westminster army men.

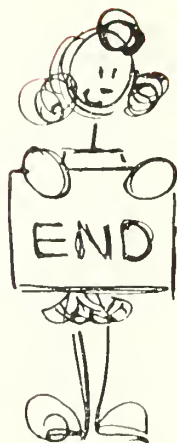

All our girls had lots of activities this year, particularly in the fields of dramatics, literature, and music. We think that as a chapter we've done pretty well, but I guess it takes all of us, your chapter, ours, and all the others, doesn't it, to make TU the super-special sorority that it is.

Behm rakes them in.

Thanks . . .

... To Michael Radock for his advice, his help, and the use of many of the News Bureau's pictures. To Professor Harold J. Brennan for his experience and ever ready help to a struggling yearbook staff. To those members of my staff who particularly put forth much time and effort to put out the year book I wish to give thanks also.

These are Eleanor Berry, our hard working literary editor who did such a swell job of collecting material for the annual and also offered plenty of sympathy when the going was tough. And Jane Greer, also literary editor, who gathered activity sheets from busy seniors.

Other members of the staff deserving special thanks are Tom McIntire, Roberta Clark, Agnes Jackson and her high pressure salesmen, Paul Krakowski, Jean Brown and Alf Laing for his tedious work in doing the individual pictures.

To George Munn, Paul Samaras, Gene Cornford, and Douglas Stewart we are especially indebted for assistance in the darkroom.

We want to thank the craftsmen and workers of Pontiac Engraving, The Eagle Printery, and S. K. Smith and Co. for their skill and help in putting out the technical part of the book.

And we want especially to thank Howard Holschuh and Forry Rosenberger for their interest and advice concerning this year's book. Well, thanks to everybody who wrote a line or took a picture for the Argo and making possible this record of 1944.
